ROUMANIAN ATROCITIES AGAINST JEWS

Brothers and sisters of human beings living in America are now eing tortured, outraged and massacred in one of the dark spots of urope known as Roumania.

Presbyterians, Baptists and Catholics are being persecuted and iscriminated against in Roumania. Jews are being ravaged and utchered.

A feeling of despair comes over one as one reads the harrowing etails. There are hooligans and barbarians in this world. Does not he civilized section owe those who are helpless protection against arbarian atrocities?

We well know that Jews are everywhere the objects of dislike and uspicion. Majorities are always intolerant of minorities. But if we re to be ill-treated, we expect the blows to be delivered in accordance ith certain rules of the game. We want a smile to cover the face hile the hand deftly strikes. It is cheering to find the opponent ake gestures like a civilized person. Twentieth-century methods, ven of oppression, bear the compensating hint of twentieth-century menties. But it hurts cruelly for a people that has oriented itself the ideas and notions of this advanced age suddenly to be confronted ith a brutal flaunting of primitive mercilessness.

Our suffering brothers and sisters are so helpless against the leering avages who have reverted to the methods of mediaevalism.

They have no means of protection. They cry to the world, to us, or help.

And what can we do? Our leaders in the United States don their ormal raiment (symbols of contemporary civilization) and betake hemselves to Washington to pour their tale of woe into the ears of heir Government. Will Washington help? And our public men hire alls and engage their best pleaders to speak to the conscience of the wentieth-century American public. They denounce and they plead nd they vocalize. This is their only strength in their impotence.

There is a public opinion in Canada. Canadian Christendom is, anything, even more humane than the Christendom of the United tates.

We cannot do much for those human beings who are ghoulishly traged in Roumania. But we can raise our voices in our despair nd let our neighbours know what is happening. The churches and good portion of the prominent laity in the United States have already xpressed their revulsion of feeling against the monstrosities in oumania. Let our public men arrange meetings where our pent-up elings of anguish will be given utterance. And let our outcry be eard by the decent men and women of Canada. Their goodwill ill be soothing. And it is possible that the sound of Canadian inion may just have the power to stay the hands of the Roumanian ordes. Let us not fail to use our only weapon—our power to appeal o the reason and conscience of humanity.

And to think that only a few weeks ago Jewish mouths kissed the ands of the symbol of the Roumanian barbarism, which pillages nd massacres Jews in Roumania!

NATHAN STRAUS, HENRY FORD AND THE JEWS

By FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

On a warm summer day in New York, some years ago, while wandering around Park Row, I was attracted by a large line forming in front of what appeared to be an ordinary refreshment booth in the park. Curiosity as well as thirst led me to join the crowd. To my amazement I read that pure milk was being served at the small cost of one cent per glass. On inquiry I learned that this was one of the many Straus milk stations in the City of New York, erected through the philanthropy of Nathan Straus, a venerable old Jewish philanthropist. Mr. Straus was endeavouring to make accessible to the poor of New York City pure milk at nominal prices. Social workers had been appalled by the large infant mortality in the metropolis of the continent, and physicians had pointed out that most of it was due to malnutrition. Nathan Straus then organized his now famous milk stations in order to enable the poor to get proper nourishment for their children. Milk was sold below cost to all who applied and particular attention was paid to milk for infants. How many lives were saved by Nathan Straus no one can estimate, and in the history of the City of New York he will always have an honoured place. This represents but one of the many philanthropies to which Mr. Straus has contributed most liberally. His generosity has become almost proverbial. In one of the recent campaigns for funds for the relief of European Jewry, Mr. Straus donated his yacht and his country home to the cause. He practically gave all the surplus he had to aid his suffering fellow-men. As a consequence of this unusual spirit of benevolence, Nathan Straus has won for himself a unique and honoured place in the affections of his fellow-townsmen and fellow-Jews.

On November 21 of last year this kind, venerable old man, in a message read at a conference about Palestine, challenged Henry Ford to lay before a jury of ten impartial public men his charges against the Jews. Ford was to marshall all his facts. Straus would endeavour to answer them. Then the jury was to decide whether Ford's charges were truth. Straus offered to let Ford appoint eight of the jurors, and he was to select the other two. For several years Ford has been pouring vicious, slanderous propaganda about Jews into the ears of the masses of America through his periodical, The Dearborn Independent. He has been transplanting the continental hatreds and prejudices in the United States. He had become the unconscious tool of the most reactionary of Europe's groups. Straus wanted a chance to meet Ford's anti-Jewish charges before the public of America that they may be refuted forever. Mr. Straus' challenge found its way to the first pages of the American newspapers, and more than a month later Henry Ford replied through an editorial in The Dearborn Independent. The editorial appeared on December 25 and we might have hoped that on that day it might have been a harbinger of fellowship and goodwill. It evaded completely Straus' charges, said something irrelevant about the impossibility of submitting these questions before a group of New York publicists—when Straus did not specify the locality from which the jurors were to be selected—and proceeded to reiterate the charges it has been making against the Jew for a number of years, which have appeared in book form and have been

Which Are You?

THERE are two kinds of people in the world—the ones who act first and think afterwards, and those who think first and act accordingly. These two classes of people constitute also the two kinds of buyers—those who spend their money first and then count their purchases, and those who first count their needs and then buy to make their money cover them. To the latter class belong those who read ADVERTISING. There is no end to spending money economically comparable to looking carefully through the advertising columns of the newspaper for buying ideas, not only where price is concerned, but as to what finds favor in style and quality. Belong, therefore, not to the class that spend at random until they have said good-bye to their last dollar without reaching the end of their buying line. Belong rather to that wise body of people who first make a note of their needs and then consult the advertising columns to find how those needs can be most satisfactorily covered by the family purse. The BEST MERCHANTS in the city advertise their wares in the REVIEW. Consult CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW ADVERTISEMENTS for valuable style and price information.

NO MATERNAL DEATH AT HOSPITAL

Not a single death occurred among the 325 women admitted to the Hebrew Maternity Hospital during the year ending December 31 last, according to the report that Miss A. Strong read before the annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of that institution in auxiliary hall of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue. Hebrew Ladies' Amalgamated Sewing Society aided the auxiliary, through supplies of clothes for babies.

Mrs. David Tannenbaum, president of the auxiliary, who was absent, had submitted her annual statement which was read by Mrs. Max Rabinovitch. In it, Mrs. Tannenbaum referred to the need for better quarters for Hebrew maternity patients. Of the children born, 161 were boys and 136 girls. The auxiliary's receipts for the year were $1,149 and the expenses, $454. Officers elected: president, Mrs. David Tannenbaum; vice-presidents, Mesdames Joseph Kellert and Max Rabinovitch; treasurer, Mrs. Louis Freedman; assistant treasurer, Mrs. B. President Coolidge last week sent to the United States Senate the report of the Secretaries of State, Commerce and Labour on the national origins quotas which, if put into effect July 1 under the provisions of the present law, will cause a radical re-arrangement of immigration quotas. Provided President Coolidge issues a proclamation of the quotas on or before April 1, 1927, 153,541 immigrants will be admitted to the United States annually as compared with 164,677 and discrimination will be in favour of England and against Northern Europe, especially Germany.

The national origins basis for quotas is part of the Immigration Act of 1924. When this act became a law it excluded the Japanese and regulated immigration on the annual basis of two per cent. of each nationality according to the census of 1890. It was the first great move to favour the Nordics by basing immigration quotas on a census of this country taken before the big influx from Southern Europe during the quarter century preceding the World War. The national origins provision, known as the Reed amendment, was tacked onto the Immigration Act in an atmosphere of high tension. It was rejected twice in the House through opposition based on discrimination against Germany in immigration, was later enacted by the House after much disagreement and then signed by the President.

The principle of the national origins provision is not based on the number of aliens in this country in any particular year. It would regulate immigration upon the national ancestry of the entire population. The quota is ascertained by determining the number of inhabitants in the United States having English, German, French or other ancestry. To determine this quota in time for April 1, 1927, the national origins provision called for the formation of an Immigration Census Board of six men. It is the report of these men which the President received last week.

The figures prepared by the Immigration Census Board will give the bulk of the immigration to Great Britain and this is how: Only 80,000 immigrants came into the United States within the first two and a half centuries after America was known. By 1740 this number had grown to 1,000,000 and any immigration from 1740 to 1790 was almost exclusively from the British Isles. According to the first census in 1790 there was a population of 3,929,214, mostly descendants of the original, predominantly British 80,000. The United States Census Bureau estimates that from these half the population of the United States has descended. All other nations together make up less than twelve per cent. of the descendants of colonial stock, of which Germany had five per cent. and the Netherlands three per cent.

If President Coolidge proclaims the new quotas on April 1 the following changes will take place in the flow of immigration into the United States: Great Britain's quota will be increased from 34,000 to about 85,000; the Irish Free State will be allowed only 8,330 instead of the present quota of 28,567; Germany, 20,028 instead of 51,227; Norway, 2,053 instead of 6,453; Poland, 3,072 instead of 9,561. Russia's quota, cut from 24,405 to 2,248 by the 1924 law, would be twice as many as now. Italy, whose quota of 42,057 was cut to 3,845, would get almost a double increase.

Will the President proclaim the quotas which will admit immigrants in numbers based on national strength as represented by the country's great-great-grandfathers? There are clauses in the national origins amendment which say that "The President shall proclaim and make known the quotas so reported . . . on or before April 1, 1927. If the proclamation is not made on or before such date, quotas proclaimed therein shall not be in effect for any fiscal year beginning after the expiration of the proclamation."

Enemies of the national origins scheme say that it can thus fail to go into effect simply by the failure of the President to proclaim the findings of the Immigration Census Board; that the whole thing rests with him. There will be plenty of enemies although as yet it is not widely known that the time is almost at hand for the Reed amendment of 1924 to go into effect. There are millions of people in the United States of German, Irish and Norwegian birth or descent who have contributed greatly to the upbuilding of the country. It is inconceivable that these and their friends will not force a fight.

The problem of immigration in the United States is no longer met in the spirit of Walt Whitman, who said: "Our destiny is to become not a conqueror nation but to become the most friendly nation—the modern composite, formed from all, welcoming all." There is a wide gap between the humanitarian law of 1852 regulating treatment of aliens in ships en route to America and the death of the melting pot idea. There have come to pass the illiteracy test of 1917, quota restrictions, racial discriminations, the two per cent. law and Nordic superiority. Perhaps, considering the trend, it is too much to hope for a repeal of the national origins amendment by Congress, but the possibility of any change in immigration legislation in this country is of vital interest to the Jews. Rabbi Isserman's Editorial translated into many languages and circulated the world over.

The refusal to answer Straus' challenge is in itself an admission of weakness. If Ford is animated by altruistic motives in arraigning the Jew before the bar of public opinion, he would welcome an investigation and would either be vindicated or refuted, and if refuted, he would publicly acknowledge his error. But Ford apparently does not want to defend his vague slanders. He knows that they are glibly swallowed by masses of people who are inflamed by the style of his missives, and who do not possess the power of critical analysis. Ford apparently is bent on harming the Jews and neither facts nor justice nor a sense of decency shall be permitted to deter him.

I am not of those who are blinded to the virtues of Henry Ford. That he is the genius of industrial America, no one can deny. He has in less than a generation created almost out of nothing the largest industrial organization in the world. In his Detroit plants alone, he employs more than 100,000 men. His machine, made accessible to many because of its cheapness, has been one of the factors which has revolutionized farm life. The isolated farmer is a picture of the past. With roads becoming better daily, and every farmer the owner of an automobile, the countryside has come closer to the city and the agriculturalist is no longer cut off from the world. Before the radio came the Ford car had ended the isolation of the farmer.

In the field of industry, Ford too has made a fine record. His minimum wage of $5.00 per day, years ago, startled the labour world, just as his five-day week announced a short while ago proved an innovation, and a worth-while innovation. Granting even that these innovations on Ford's part were not altruistic, they represented nevertheless advances in the field of labour. In an interview with the New York Times, Ford stated that he had instituted the five-day week because the extra day of recreation for the worker would mean the greater use of the automobile and hence his business would profit. In Detroit I was informed that Ford's concern has expanded so rapidly that his production is greater than his consumption and hence he must cut down production. Be that as it may, Ford has built up a vast enterprise, and in many ways has expressed a progressive spirit. He is to-day one of the richest, if not the richest man in the world.

But though Ford has been exceedingly successful in the industrial world, yet wherever he has ventured out of the realm of his specific field, he has blundered most stupidly. All will remember how during the Great War, he equipped a peace ship, and with a party of dreamers like himself set out to Europe to end the World War. His peace-venture ended most militantly. His colleagues could not agree on any one cause of action and his aim was wrecked before his ship reached port. Some of the crusaders of peace became enemies, because of their differences. His peace crusade proved a miserable fiasco. His intentions were the finest, but they lacked intelligent guidance.

Subsequently Ford had a severe altercation with the Chicago Tribune. The Tribune in one of its editorials called him an anarchist. Ford's reply to this was a law suit against the Tribune. The Tribune's lawyers put Ford on the witness stand and cross-examined him. They exposed his abysmal ignorance and made him the laughing stock of the world. Ford had been a serious presidential contender, until he took the stand in his suit against the Tribune. When asked who Arnold Bennet was Ford replied that he was an American traitor. When asked subsequently what an anarchist was, Ford admitted his inability to define the term, over which he was bringing suit.

It was subsequent to this trial with the Chicago Tribune that something occurred which started Henry Ford on his Jew-baiting campaign and which has ruined his chances of an honourable place in history. Some believe that the trouble began on the peace-ship where Ford quarrelled with some Jews who were his guests. Others say that a Jew suggested the idea of the peace-ship to Ford and when that failed, his wrath against an individual found expression in his wrath against a religious group. Another guess is that Jewish lawyers were those who quizzed him mercilessly, when on the stand in his trial against the Tribune, while others believe that when Ford applied to Wall Street for financial help, it was denied him, because he refused to sell an interest in his firm to Wall Street bankers. When these refused him, Ford is said to have applied to a Jewish banking concern and that concern also refused to help him. Ford engineered then the biggest salesmanship feat in the history of the world, when he compelled all his dealers to buy for cash a certain amount of cars. He thus financed himself and thereafter began to take vengeance on all the Jews. No one can know definitely what it was that sent this automobile manufacturer on his anti-Semitic career. But the facts are that his propaganda has been most pernicious and has done much harm.

In the editorial of the Dearborn Independent which appeared on December 25, the writer reiterates the old charges against the Jews. The first accusation is that the Jews have invented a financial and interest system. During the days when the church dominated Europe, Christians were not allowed to practise usury, which did not mean in those days what it means to-day. Usury then was equivalent to legitimate interest. The Jews not being subject to church laws were the only ones who could establish banking and this they did. But others followed their example, particularly among the powerful Italian cities. The Medici family which gave Europe popes and rulers, great patrons of art and great rogues, was one of the early banking families. The family crest of that noted Italian house is the crest of the modern pawn-broker. One of the founders of the Medici house was a physician, on whose crest five large pills appeared. These pills were later reduced to three when the Medicis were bankers. These three pills were on the shield which hung in the front of Europe's leading banking house. All the smaller bankers copied them and the pawn-broker to this day retains the Medici shield. If the Jews invented banking, they rendered a service to humanity. Without banking modern civilization could not exist. The transition from the feudal system of society to the capitalistic system was only possible through the rise of capital. I hold no brief for our present economic system. It may be surpassed. It very likely will change as other economic systems have changed, but meanwhile, capitalism has been and is of use to society. The most dogmatic socialist or opponent of capitalism will admit that it has functioned and if the Jews contributed that to mankind, he contributed something worth while.

Charge number two in the Christmas editorial of the Dearborn Independent is that all financial centers of government, including the United States Federal Reserve System, are controlled by Jews. You will note that all the accusations against the Jews are generally vague—therein lies their strength. But here Ford was specific and he erred. When he stated that Jews control the Federal Reserve System of the United States, he can easily be refuted, for in that system but five per cent. of the directors and managers are Jews. In regard to controlling all the financial centers of government, I wonder what financial centers the Jew controls in the Province of Ontario. I know of no Jew who sits on the board of directors of any bank here.

The next charge is that the Jew is a potent power in government, another very vague and meaningless charge. In some countries where the Jew has shown legislative ability, he has been given important positions of trust, but when he has administered them, he did so not as Jew, but as citizen of the country, which honoured him. The Marquis of Reading in India served not as Jew but as loyal British subject. Jewish administrators have frequently in their desire to be neutral to Jewish affairs been unfair to them. The case of Sir Herbert Samuel in Palestine is a recent example of that. As a commissioner in Palestine, Sir Herbert was so anxious to show no favoritism to the Jews that in many instances he was unfair to them. He established unfortunate precedents for his successors. Disraeli, when writing the Treaty of Berlin in 1878, would not have included in that treaty a clause compelling Roumania to give citizenship privileges to all her subjects, if Sir Moses Montefiore had not insisted upon it and prevailed on other statesmen to have such a clause inserted. If the Jew is so potent in all centers of government, why has no Jew ever represented an Ontario constituency either in the provincial or federal house and why was the plea of Canada's leading Jews for the admission of 3,000 refugees to Canada next year, rejected by the Department of Immigration at Ottawa?

The next charge is that the Jew controls the revolutionary elements of the world on the one hand and the ultra-conservative elements on the other. That charge is not explained. How a group of men can be backing capitalism the world over, and Bolshevism in Russia is not explained, for it cannot be explained. Among the Bolsheviks the Jews held less than three per cent. of the important offices. Of course the Jews were among the Bolshevik revolutionists. Is it any wonder that they were? After so many years of the most cruel persecutions, any people with courage and backbone would have opposed the Czar. When rulers become as tyrannical as Russia's monarchs were, then all decent men and women must rise in revolt aginst them. This very charge is a boomerang. It indicates the Jew's lack of unity, and demonstrates clearly to the world that which we Jews are well aware of, that there are no Jewish political and economic views. The Jew is an individualist. Some subscribe to capitalism and some to socialism. Some are conservatives and some radicals. Some subscribe to no particularism. There is no unity in Jewish circles, except as Zangwill puts it, the unity of suffering. In our own community we are hopelessly divided and even in charitable efforts we have not been able completely to unite our community. Those who know Jewish life cannot say that the Jewish Bolshevik, say a Trotsky, and a Jewish capitalist in England, say a Sir Alfred Mond, work hand in hand. One of the most relentless journalistic foes of the Russian Revolution has been the New York Times, a paper owned by a Jew.

The last charge is that the Jews control all wars, they make them and profiteer by them. Quite the contrary is the case. The Jew suffers most from wars. The losers always make the Jew the scapegoat. No people have suffered as have the Jews of Poland and Russia in the last war. Throughout all the centuries of persecution not so many Jewish lives were lost as were lost as a direct result of the last war. If Jews caused wars and if Jews are so united, would they have cause a war in which more than a half million Jewish lives were lost, and which has impoverished the strongest Jewish communities in the world, those of Poland and Russia where Jewish learning and culture flourished, where there were great Jewish academies and invaluable Jewish libraries?

These vague, sensational and fictitious charges which European bureaucracy has frequently used to conceal its own corruption have been mouthed by the spokesmen of Ford, and they have done their harm. Ford has recreated for the world the myth of the international Jew and his menace to society, and his propaganda has had effect. It has its effect in America in the Klan, in Germany in a recrudescense of anti-Semitism; in Hungary in all kinds of discrimination; in Roumania, in excesses and crimes that are too horrible to relate. Quite likely the visit of Queen Marie was the quest of Henry Ford's America. Her trip was financed by him and Roumania to-day is the most anti-Semitic country of Europe. But last year an army lieutenant, who admitted he murdered thirty-three Jewish men, women and children, was acquitted by a Roumanian court. It is not impossible that there is a connection between Ford's friendship for Roumania's rulers, his anti-Semitic propaganda and Roumania's hostility to Jews.

Just contrast these two individuals, Straus and Ford—the Jew and the Christian. Both have attained wealth—though Straus is a pygmy compared to Ford—the one is a great mercantile institution and the other in a gigantic industry. The one has devoted his wealth to services of love and fellowship—to giving milk to the poor of all creeds and classes. The other is using part of his wealth to stir up strife and discord. There is a real menace in wealth. A man like Ford running amuck in society with untold power can become a serious danger. Other great men of wealth—like Rockfeller and Carnegie have established huge foundations for research—for medicine. They have conceived themselves as stewards of the wealth they have amassed, and have used it in the interest of all humanity. Ford's editorial chides Straus for his charity. Ford states he does not believe in charity. He believes in paying an equitable wage. He hopes charity will be abolished. I agree with Ford—I, too, hope that society will be so organized that charity will not be necessary—but till that day dawns charity is necessary and the poor must be helped. Straus has saved human lives by his charities and Ford has embittered them by his poisonous attacks and indirectly he may have been the cause of the loss of human life. Perhaps, some Jewish orphans in Roumania mourn their father because of the hatred disseminated by Ford's publications.

I believe Ford is just a man of good intentions who has gone astray—a kindly liberal fallen in the hands of bad counsellors. Just think of where he stands to-day—he who a few years ago equipped a peace-ship to end the war. He stands to-day with the military and junker castes of the world—with all the forces of reaction in Europe and America. The patron of the peace ship is to-day the pal of the German junkers and monarchists who are backing the anti-Semitic programme in Germany. He stands with the Klan in its illiberal methods. He stands with Roumanias' foul aristocracy and Jew-haters. He stands with the reactionary party in Hungary. What a comedown! How the mighty one has fallen! The dreamer, the idealist, the friend of those who menace the peace of Europe, the comrade of the darkest forces of human reaction. I believe Ford is to be pitied. When all strive for goodwill, this genius of Michigan makes for ill-will, and on Christmas Day he sends out his message of hate. Truly here is a human tragedy—a man of peace becoming a sower of hatred.

Every myth, my friends, has some basis in fact. The myths of dying and resurrected gods among primitive peoples had their foundation in the departure and the return of the sun. When the sun departed, the god died. When the sun returned, the god was born. So also the myth of the international Jew has its basis in fact. Its basis is found in Biblical prophecy. The prophets speak of Jerusalem as the capital of the world, of the hill of God to which all peoples shall come. The Bible too speaks of the chosen peoples. These two Biblical ideas are the basis for the myth of the international Jew. The Jew is God's favorite and is therefore to rule the world. That is how the Biblical allusions have been interpreted—or rather misinterpreted. By chosen people, the prophet Isaiah did not mean a haughty arrogant people that would strut about the earth, but the servants of the Lord—who would open the blind eyes and bring the prisoners out of the dungeons. When Micah spoke of the hill of God in Jerusalem to which all nations would pay homage, he did not

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write: G. A. ELLIOTT, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario. "Please mention this paper."

"We are not all wet"

To be sure we do wet wash, or "damp wash" as we call it, but we have five different services altogether. These range from damp wash ready to hang out on your own clothes lines all the way to "semi-finished," which has everything ironed ready for use, except some of the fussy corners. Our "damp wash" services are super-speed—returned to you the next morning. Prices, of course, vary according to the amount of work we save you, but all are pleasingly economical. Phone to-day!

Lewis Browne, illustrator as well as author of "This Believing World," which has been selected by the American Institute of Graphic Arts for its first annual Illustrated Book Exhibit, never received an hour of art instruction in his life. He first took to drawing, he confesses, to keep himself from falling asleep in the classrooms when he was a student at the theological seminary. His products then were mainly caricatures, and did not bring him into any particular favour with his professors. Later, when he found he was also able to sketch scenes with fair accuracy, he took to carrying a pad and pencil with him wherever he went. Most of the illustrations in "This Believing World" were made by the author while he was wandering in the Orient, gathering material for the writing of the book. Mr. Browne also illustrated his earlier book, "Stranger Than Fiction."

In the plans for allotting rooms to next year's Harvard seniors, announced by W. G. Saltonstall, '28, chairman of the Harvard Senior Dormitory Committee, attention is called to the fact that the new Straus Hall, which is in its initial year of service, and which is housing a majority of sophomores, is to be converted into a senior dormitory. Herbert N. Straus, New York City, the donor, originally intended it for a sophomore dormitory, and it was opened to the class of '29 last spring. Now, however, Mr. Straus prefers to have it occupied only by seniors.

EMPIRE

In selecting "Mr. Pim Passes By," that most delicately alluring of A. A. Milne's dramatic compositions, for presentation at the Empire Theatre, next week, the Theatre Guild of Canada has chosen another happy medium in their series of revivals of English plays.

Recalling William Podmore's memorable performance of Lob in "Dear Brutus" with William Gillette, the announcement that he is to personate Mr. Pim next week will be received with a deal of interest by Toronto theatre-goers.

The story of "Mr. Pim Passes By" has to do with a comfortably settled English couple, who are suddenly startled by the appearance of the forgetful Mr. Pim, who makes the casual revelation that the former husband of Mrs. Warden is living.

Around this situation the skilful Mr. Milne has woven a comedy that has become a classic in its own particular field. Everyone knows how rich it is in delicious character delineation, in deft plot development, and in almost Shavian ridicule of blind English conventionality.

The entangling and unravelling processes are marvelously expert, while a subtle suggestion of larger meanings and vaguely tantalizing possibilities is cast over the whole play by the wistfully elusive character in the title role.

It is to be anticipated that William Podmore will score a great success as Mr. Pim. His masterly Lob assures us of a notable Pim and we await with keen delight the acute suspense of his gentle blundering.

"Mr. Pim Passes By," being a Milne play, can be relied upon to do its part and when it is taken into consideration that the staging is in the capable hands of director Podmore, a week of keen delight is in store for patrons of the English Repertory Company.

DR. JOHN SHAYNE

The Toronto Jewish community has lost a rare personality and Canadian Zionism an outstanding enthusiast, when Dr. John Shayne passed away.

We know few men in Canada, who have the capacity for devotion to an ideal that Dr. Shayne has displayed, during his years of association with the Zionist movement. In the communal activities of most people, the expenditure of money and energy is but a small fraction of the amount of which the contributors are really capable. Dr. Shayne made no reservations when he identified himself with Zionism. He threw himself into the work with the abandon which is characteristic of the Jewish idealist at his best.

Those who have had the privilege of knowing Dr. Shayne intimately will never forget the remarkable courage and idealism which he showed during the last two years of his life, while in the grip of the dread malady which overcame him. Suffering the most unbearable physical agony he did not for a moment stop thinking of the needs of Zionism. His indomitable courage in battling for his life against the relentless disease, was the admiration of his friends. And almost until the last day of his life he kept on working for Zionism, attending meetings, addressing audiences, planning, scheming and inspiring his co-workers and followers.

Non-Zionists will join Zionists in paying tribute to a genuine enthusiast and idealist. To the bereaved family we tender our sympathy and condolence. The memory of Dr. Shayne will long remain an inspiration to his associates in the Zionist movement.

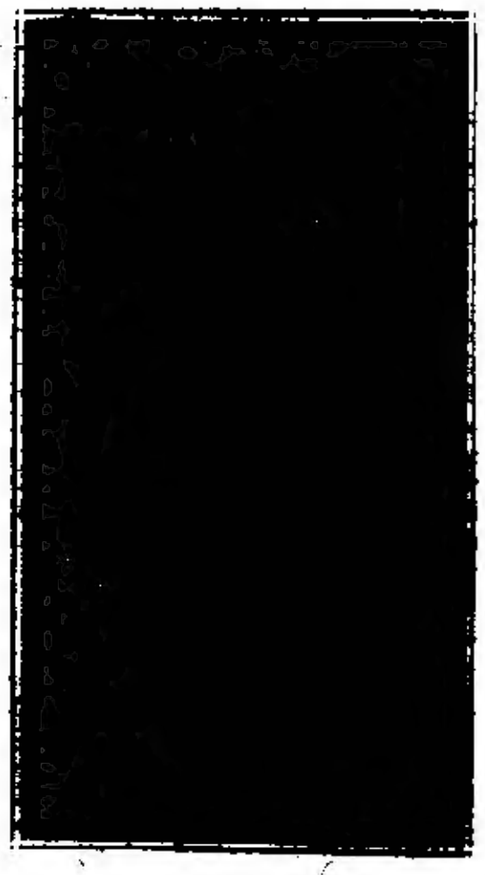
ZIONIST CLUB FOUNDER

Funeral service was held at 1 p.m. Thursday, January 6, at the Zionist Institute, Beverley Street, for Dr. John M. Shayne, who died at Weston Hospital. Rabbi Gordon and Rabbi F. M. Isserman conducted the service, and burial was made in the Zionist cemetery.

Dr. Shayne founded the Herzl Zion Junior Society, which developed into the present Herzl Zion Club, and was president of the Bnai Zion Society. He was twice a delegate to the international Zionist congress at Vienna and at Basle, Switzerland.



Dr. John M. Shayne

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and member of the Marshall Lodge of New York City, and at one time was an immigration inspector.

He had been ill for three years, since contracting an illness while on a Zionist mission in Winnipeg as a member of the National Council of the Zionist Organization of Canada.

mean a Jerusalem ruling the world by its physical power, but he meant a world paying homage to the spiritual ideals of the prophets and a spiritual Jerusalem established in the hearts and souls of men. The Jew will not conquer the world, but the God of the Jews, the vision of Israel's prophets will. And "not by might, nor by strength but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

Born in Moscow in 1871, he was brought up and educated there. His father was a prosperous umbrella manufacturer in that city and John Shayne entered that business upon his graduation from university in Moscow. In 1893 he emigrated to America and settled in New York City. His father joined him there a few years later and with him organized an umbrella factory.

Mr. Shayne, the younger, soon found, however, that he was not destined for a commercial career and became engaged in the theatrical business. For several years he was an impresario in New York, a calling which he forsook to study law. He never practised at the bar, however, and turned to the study of osteopathy. At a Michigan institution he was granted his degree of master of osteopathy, and shortly after, in 1906, moved to Toronto and took up practice here.

Until 1916 Mr. Shayne practised his profession in Toronto, when he came to live in Montreal. Here he was interested in a business venture for about four years and then returned to Toronto, where he lived until his death.

Surviving him are his widow (née Olga Gunzberg), member of the Odessa branch of the family of Baron Gunzberg; a son, Alexander J., of Montreal; two daughters, Mrs. William Harris, wife of Dr. William Harris, and Mrs. A. Shapiro, both of Toronto. Four sisters, residents of New York, also survive him. He was an only son.

Solomon Bloomgarden (Yehoash) Dead

Solomon Bloomgarden, famous Jewish poet, known under the nom de plume of Yehoash, died suddenly yesterday morning at his home in New York City, at the age of 56.

With the death of Yehoash, an outstanding figure of Yiddish literature has passed. He was the author of numerous poems, fables and dramatic sketches of present-day Jewish life and on historical subjects. He translated into Yiddish Longfellow's "Hiawatha," and was one of the few Jewish poets who introduced into Yiddish literature the modern style under the influence of the American and European modern school. His last work was the translation into Yiddish of the Pentateuch, the five books of Moses and the Prophets. The translation, which was rendered in a beautiful Yiddish, was a result of long years of research and literary efforts.

Yehoash was born in 1870 in Wierzbolowo, government of Suwali, Russian Poland. He received a thorough Jewish education, having studied Talmud until the age of 13, when he came under the the influence of the Hebraic Haskalah literature. In 1885 he went to the Talmudic Academy at Wolojin. He soon left the academy to take up the study of foreign languages and started to publish Yiddish poems in the Yiddish Bibliotequi, which was published in Warsaw under the editorship of J. L. Peretz. He emigrated to the United States in 1890 where, for want of faith in his literary ability, he engaged at first in business. In 1900 he was taken sick with tuberculosis and went to Denver, Colorado, where he resumed his literary activities.

Among his poems the best known are the "Jewish Legends," with which he became one of the staunchest representatives of the romantic school in Yiddish literature. His ballads were written in a particularly fascinating traditional tone and are an outstanding contribution to Yiddish literature. His "Journey to Palestine" was translated into English and published by the Jewish Publication Society under the title "The Feet of the Messenger." He was a member of the editorial staff of the "Day," where his translation of the Bible is now being published.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday. Arrangements for the rites have not yet been completed.
